their feminine powers and dazzling costumes reflect the most ancient tales

The Age of Accountability Dominic Belmonte, 2020-05-14 It's clear that American public education has been under assault for more than the last 30 years. So much of this current age of accountability has focused on blame both of teachers and those who prepare them. Somehow unlike in other professions, declarations were made to the effect that anyone could teach better than teachers, including business leaders and people from top universities without teacher preparation. The Age of Accountability scrutinizes the attack on teachers through weaponized data. While an effective corporate tool to improve bottom line goals, its use in education became more sinister and misanthropic. International PISA scores imply the mediocre ability of American students, fueling a belief that American education needed more than an upgrade. The only answer that would placate many was a complete upheaval, a redefinition of a teacher and who should be permitted to become one. We teachers ceded authority to these business and legislative forces. Their subsequent fervor for testing overwhelmed teaching and drove the joy out of schooling for students. It is time for a recounting of what has been done to the profession and to our children. Young teachers need encouragement and veteran teachers need reminding of their valiant and effective efforts. Perfect for courses such as History of Education, Assessment in Teacher Evaluation, Value Added Metrics, Urban Education, University Teacher Preparation, Teaching and Learning.

Going Remote Adam Bessie, Peter Glanting, 2023-05-16 A searingly honest graphic memoir dispatch from a community college professor who cares deeply for his students and family while also combating personal health issues from the frontlines of public education during the pandemic. Going Remote is a joint production of The Censored Press and Seven Stories Press. With Peter Glanting's powerful illustrations, author Adam Bessie, an English professor and graphic essayist, uses the unique historical moment of the COVID-19 pandemic as a catalyst to explore the existing inequalities and student struggles that plague the public education system. This graphic memoir chronicles the reverberations from the onset of the pandemic in 2020 when students and educators left their physical classrooms for remote learning. As a professor at a community college, Bessie shows how, despite these challenges, teachers work tirelessly to create a more equitable educational system by responding to mental health issues and student needs. From the Black Lives Matter protests to fielding distressed emails from students to considering the future of his own career, Going Remote also tells the personal story of Bessie's cancer diagnosis and treatment during the pandemic. A fusion of memoir, meditation, and scholarship, Going Remote is a powerful account of a crisis moment in educational history, demonstrating both personal and societal changes. Includes back matter revealing the literary and theoretical touchpoints that inform Going Remote. Works by Octavia Butler, Neil Postman, Jaron Lanier, and Diane Ravitch.
