was labor in the lives of African American slaves that it has often been taken for granted with little attention given to the type of work that slaves did and the circumstances surrounding it Cultivation and Culture brings together leading scholars of slavery historians anthropologists and sociologists to explore when where and how slaves labored in growing the New World's great staples and how this work shaped the institution of slavery and the lives of African American slaves. The authors focus on the interrelationships between the demands of particular crops, the organization of labor, the nature of the labor force, and the character of agricultural technology.
