Thomas Edison

Thomas Edison was born in Ohio on February 11, 1847. As a young child, Thomas got scarlet fever and had many ear infections. This resulted in him having hearing difficulty in both ears. He was almost deaf as an adult.

In 1854, his family moved to Michigan. Thomas went to public school for only 12 weeks. He was a hyperactive kid, who was always distracted at school, so his mom decided to homeschool him. He enjoyed reading books and learned how to be independent. In 1859, when Thomas was twelve years old, he sold newspapers at the Grand Trunk Railroad station. He would also do experiments using various chemicals that he found at the railroad station. Then, he accidentally set a train car on fire and was kicked out of the train station.

In 1861, when he was fifteen years old, Thomas worked as a telegraph operator. During his spare time, he would experiment with the telegraph and electrical wires. He was always trying to find ways to improve technology.

In 1868, Thomas moved to Boston, when he invented an electronic voting recorder to quickly count votes during an election.

Thomas Edison

Thomas Edison moved to New York and invented the first practical incandescent light bulb. He helped people in the stock market, and he decided to move to New York.

Edison set up a small laboratory in New York and did incredible things. For example, he invented the phonograph. This was a machine that could record and play back sounds. In 1879, he founded Edison Illuminating Company. He continued to invent and improve his systems. He also invented the first motion picture camera and batteries.

On October 18, 1931, he died. He was eighty-four years old. He will be remembered for his many inventions, including the light bulb, the phonograph, and the motion picture camera.
