

A Sound of Thunder

INTRODUCTION

BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF Ray Bradbury

Bradbury spent his childhood in Chicago. After the family moved west from Los Angeles, California, Bradbury lived in California's Santa Monica district from the age of 12 until attending high school in nearby Hollywood and its environs. He was a voracious reader and continued his reading at the public library. He worked in bookstores, selling newspapers and magazines during his spare time, and began writing his first story "Darkness at Noon" in 1940, just before the United States entered World War II. Bradbury was not affected by the war; instead, he managed to continue what he was doing during the war. He published his first story in Horizon, 1945, and in 1947, that was also the year "Fahrenheit 451" quickly became well-known. Bradbury published his first novel, Invitation of a Small Summer in 1948. The book, which was incredibly well received, gave the story concerns about receiving his education. Bradbury then wrote his first screenplay and television adaptation of books, including his first novel, The Martian Chronicles, and his first story, "Golden Apples." Bradbury repeatedly worked throughout his life, attempting to publish more. Bradbury received the 1955 Nebula Award for best of the year of 1954, and continued to publish and receive recognition and awards throughout his life.

HISTORICAL CONTEXT

"A Sound of Thunder" was written shortly after Bradbury's participation in World War II, a controversial experience. Bradbury's concern about technology was the central theme. From the beginning, with that concern, Bradbury had the reputation of the combined "good" and "bad" of the possibility of nuclear war. While it was not specifically addressed in the story, "A Sound of Thunder" does explore the fear of what new technology may mean for our future.

RELATED LITERARY WORKS

There were countless popular science fiction and fantasy stories that often dealt with space exploration. "The Time Machine" by H.G. Wells, published in 1895, which dealt with a time traveler who goes through time. Arthur C. Clarke's 1935 story "Earth Orbit" also dealt with time in the form of the atomic bomb. The danger of nuclear war was a common theme in popular fiction at the time. Bradbury's concern with technology and its effects on our future was a common theme in fiction during the 1940s and 1950s. Bradbury was not a common concern for fiction during the 1940s and 1950s.

Several short stories, including "The Sound of Thunder," were published in Bradbury's Collected Stories in 1952, as well as a collection of Bradbury's Best Stories in 1955, and a book of Bradbury's Best Stories in 1955.
