The resulting mice, which express human hprt in all tissues, are fertile and healthy. The authors have also used this model to study the effects of various hprt mutations on the development of the immune system. The results show that mice with a mutation in the hprt gene that encodes the active site of the enzyme develop a severe combined immunodeficiency (SCID) that is similar to the one seen in humans with the same mutation.

The reactor transfer to energy has been completed. A 2700° F. reaction continued until hydrogen died by burning outside the core providing coolant for the system. It will prove important to know how the temperature parameters will behave under emergency & beyond design conditions. Reactor 2700° F. is just another milestone achieved in the development of the reactor. The reactor is now being used to test and develop the ability to use a computer to control the reactor.
