1. DNA: The Genetic Material
 - DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) is the genetic material that is passed from parent to offspring.
 - It is a long, thin molecule that is made up of nucleotides.
 - Nucleotides are made up of a phosphate group, a sugar, and a nitrogenous base.
 - DNA contains the genetic instructions necessary for the growth, development, functioning, and reproduction of organisms.
2. Replication of DNA
 - DNA replication is the process by which a cell makes an identical copy of its DNA.
 - It occurs during the S phase of the cell cycle.
 - The process is semi-conservative, meaning each new DNA molecule consists of one original strand and one newly synthesized strand.
 - Synthesis of DNA begins at a specific point called the origin of replication.
 - The result is two identical DNA molecules, each containing one original strand and one newly synthesized strand.
3. DNA, RNA, and Protein
 - DNA serves as the template for the synthesis of RNA molecules within a process called transcription.
 - RNA is single-stranded and contains ribose sugar instead of deoxyribose.
 - There are three main types of RNA: messenger RNA (mRNA), transfer RNA (tRNA), and ribosomal RNA (rRNA).
 - mRNA carries the genetic information from DNA to the ribosome, where proteins are synthesized.
 - tRNA transfers amino acids to the ribosome during protein synthesis. It has an anticodon that pairs with the codon on the mRNA.
 - rRNA is a structural component of ribosomes.
 - Ribosomes are the sites of protein synthesis.
 - Some organisms have plasmids, which are small, circular DNA molecules that can replicate independently of the chromosomal DNA.
 - Plasmids often carry genes that confer resistance to antibiotics or other selective advantages.
 - Some organisms have viruses, which are small particles that can replicate only inside a host cell.
 - Viruses are made up of genetic material (DNA or RNA) surrounded by a protein coat called a capsid.
 - Some viruses can cause diseases, while others are used in biotechnology.
