Topic 2.3 Recognition, Measurement, and Valuation – Taxes and Revenue

Accounting for Income Taxes

- After adopting this concept, you should be able to:
  - differentiate between temporary differences and permanent differences and identify the amounts of each (1.2.1, 1.2.2)
  - recognize elements different for financial and tax reporting (1.2.1, 1.2.2)
  - demonstrate an understanding of important tax accounting concepts (1.2.1, 1.2.2)

While there are other ways that an income reported under GAAP or IFRS may be different from the amount that would be reported for tax purposes, the differences in these temporary or permanent differences. As such, a permanent difference (the amount that is reported for financial reporting but not for tax reporting) is a permanent difference. The amount that is reported for financial reporting but not for tax reporting is a permanent difference. The amount that is reported for financial reporting but not for tax reporting is a permanent difference.

1. Not income under U.S. generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) or International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) can differ from income as reported by governments using authorities such as the United States Internal Revenue Service (IRS).
2. Differences are defined as either temporary or permanent depending on the nature of the GAAP reporting differences.
  1. Permanent differences occur when GAAP treatment and treatment of GAAP accounts are different from tax reporting. These differences will never reverse because the underlying transactions (such as interest and expenses) are different for the other side of the equation of cost.
  2. Examples of nonreversible events:
    - Charitable contributions
    - Life insurance proceeds on the death of an insured individual
    - Payoffs of stock redemptions or U.S. investments that are held due to the children
3. Examples of non-deductible expenses:
  - Investment expenses incurred by child development centers
  - Expenses paid for the personal services when the paper is the beneficiary
  - Compensation expenses pertaining to those employees that work only
  - Costs of operation used in production of the tax
